Policemen have been asked to watch the pedestrian as well as the motorist before giving the "go" signals. This, it is stated, has been neglected to a certain extent in the past, with the result that the pedestrian crossing a street takes his chance with the automobilist, in avoiding an accident. for Many Accidents Automobile drivers who violate traffic regulations and make life hazardous for their fellow autoists and for pedestrians are not confined to the gnorant, or to those who drive trucks and commercial cars, according to Capt. Albert Headley, head of the traffic police, who finds university and college men fully as reckless and irresponsible as any other group.

This statement was made last night by the officer when he spoke to the Men's Club of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church on traffic conditions in Washington.

"The organizaton which I command is on the street 365 days in the year and twenty-four hours a day," continued Capt. Headley, "so I am not speaking with out knowledge of the facts. And I could say some very severe words about the cultured men of this and other cities, men who have all of the comforts of life, but who seem to have no regard for the comfort or the safety of others."

Urges Traffic Court.

"A traffic court where violators of the regulations could be taken before a judge and tried at once is badly needed in this city," said the officer.

"When the captain at a police station calls the roll at 8 o'clock in the morning he asks all who must go to court that day to hold up their hands. Sometimes almost every man on traffic duty has to go. He must leave for court at once to get his papers made out, and yet the judge may not show up until 10:30 o'clock. That means the streets are not properly policed at the very time policemen are most needed.

"If you set a man to dig a cellar you give him a pick and shovel, and if you want traffic properly controlled in Washington you must give us more men and more and better motor cycles. When people want to find fault they usually pick out a 'copper' and say he is not on the job, but we are doing the very best we can for you, and we have been making on the average sixty-two arrests per day for violations of the traffic laws.

Capt. Headley was told that some traffic regulation was necessary in front of the church, which is on Columbia, road near 14th street, at the time when church and Sunday school were dismissed, and he promised to investigate conditions there next Sunday and see what could be done.

Public School Teachers Directed to Introduce

New Course in Safety The need of "eternal vigilance as the price of safety" is to be impressed on Washington public school children as never before. Orders issued today by Supt. Frank W. Ballou require that teachers and officers in the school system for the remainder of the present school year give daily lessons on the subject of the preservation of life and limb, this subject to be a regular and serious part of the classroom instruction.

These orders were issued by Dr. Bal-lou at the suggestion of his "safety first committee," which is composed of B. W. Murch, Walter B. Patterson and H. W. Draper. This committee was ap-pointed by the superintendent to con-sider the subject of "safety first" and sider the subject of "safety first" and to formulate suggestions as to how best to impress on the school pupils the need of observing "safety first" rules.

Besides the above orders, Dr. Ballou requested "that each principal call a meeting of his teachers to study and improve traffic conditions in the neighborhood of his building or buildings; that mottoes relating to safety be placed upon the blackboards at frequent intervals and that pupils be frequent intervals and that pupils be encouraged to submit to their teach-ers original slogans and posters for his and similar use; that a series of things not to do be prepared by the things not to do be prepared by the teachers for their pupils; that super-visors be requested to consult with their building principals regarding the feasibility of arranging for talks, picture exhibitions and other meet-ings with the safety first thought as the main purpose; that the Milyroules. the main purpose; that the Milwaukee letter to his parents requesting then to co-operate in every way to prevent accidents on the streets, in the home,

In submitting its recommendations to Supt. Ballou, the committee stated that "the traffic conditions in the District are deplorable and demand the most serious consideration by all citizens, and especially school officers and teachers. In the month of November there were twelve deaths from street accidents; many people were seriously injured and much property damage was done. In all, 551 traffic accidents were reported to the police department."

the Peabody School last night. A motion was passed placing the assotication on record as favoring the placing of white lines to mark paths of a railroad, the Supreme Court held yesterday. Interpretation of the statute by the court came in the appeal brought by the government in its case against the Northern Pacific Railway Company, which had won in the lower courts its contention that transfer trains according to the special benefit of school children who are obliged to cross the section on their route to school.

A resolution advocating an unfavorable stand on the blue laws was laid on the table until the next meet.
